Mr. George Bush, Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D. C. 20505

Dear Mr. Bush:

According to the Final Report of the Senate Select Committee To Study Governmental Operations with respect to Intelligence Activities (i.e., the "Church Committee"), the CIA has involved American academics and academic institutions in at least three respects which compromise their professional integrity. In addition, there are intimations in the Report in its italicized passages (which a footnote identifies as having been heavily edited "at the request of executive agencies") and a separate statement by Senators Phillip Hart, Walter Mondale, and Gary Hart suggesting still further involvement which, in the view of those Committee members, implies still other improper uses. (E.g., at p. 568 they write: "The discussion of the role of U.S. academics in the CIA's clandestine activities has been so diluted that its scope and impact on the American academic institutions is no longer clear . . . modified to the point where the Committee's concern about the CIA's blurring of the line between overt and covert, foreign and domestic activities, has been lost.")

The three respects that appear to be evident from what was not abridged in the Report are these:

a) Generally, an academic is expected to note his relation with an outside sponsor in reporting or publishing the results of his work in order to enable the reader to take that sponsorship into account. (Among law reviews, for instance, the standard rule is that an article subsidized by an interested party, or even a manuscript submitted by an attorney whose firm represents a client with an interest in the subject with which the article is concerned, must, at a minimum, disclose that relationship.) It is, of course, no answer at all that the author might himself prefer that the sponsorship not be disclosed. It is my understanding that the CIA has involved itself in this kind of unprofessional conduct. The general awareness that it is done necessarily undermines the credibility of all published research.

b) The Report speaks directly also of CIA contracting with scholars for publication to be used as "propaganda" which nonetheless appears to be professionally detached and reliable scholarly publication. Of course one can readily appreciate the exploitative value of trading upon the reputation of scholarly work to induce greater readership credibility than more forthright disclosure of its sponsorship and propaganda intention would bear. Insofar as there is a deliberate withholding of the true object of such publication, and a willful omission of disclosure that professional ethical standards would otherwise require, I believe it not too strong to have described these practices as calculated to mislead and to misrepresent. They are, in my profession, grounds for reproof and reprimand.

Additionally, the Report indicates that "operational use" is made of academics in "covert" fashion and that still others "are used in an unwitting manner for minor activities," involving, in the aggregate, academics from more than 100 institutions. In each of these respects (and the passages in which they are chronicled are heavily italicized -- indicating the substantial censorship of which several Committee members complained), the Committee again drew attention to its own concern (which I fully share) "that American academics involved in such activities may undermine public confidence." It is quite impossible to infer from these passages that all that is involved is an admirable desire by the CIA not "to isolate itself from the good counsel of the best scholars in our country" (as you say in your letter), rather than, as the Committee says, much more ulterior uses.

The massive censoring of the Committee Report, the separate disclosures that the CIA disregarded its statutory mandate to confine itself to intelligence and to exercise no "police" powers within the United States (as in fact it did), the established fact that the agency clearly has not confined itself "to provide the policy makers of our government with information and assessments of foreign developments" but has, rather, pursued horrendous military operations abroad, and the concurrent unravelling of remarkable illegal domestic activity by the FBI as well, are, respectfully, not reassuring.

You write that "whatever you have heard about the past, I can assure you that there is now no reason for the members of your association to fear any threat to their integrity . . . from the CIA." (Emphasis added.) In anticipation, I expressed interest that you have announced that accredited journalists will no longer be used for covert operations, and asked specifically that an identical policy be announced as well in respect to academics. Your letter is doubtless written with care, yet I do not find within it even the facsimile of such an assurance. Whether by further correspondence or on the occasion of meeting "with a few senior officials of this Agency," as you suggest, I would be much relieved by that assurance of equal protection for the integrity of academics. Through the General Secretary of AAUP, Dr. Joseph Duffey, I shall provide every encouragement for such a meeting.

Finally, I appreciate your concern that my letter was released prior to receiving a reply from you. It was exceptional, albeit not exactly in the way you suggested (namely, that it suggests that my purpose was "something other than the resolution of the problem"). Rather, the point was additional to the immediate problem. The Church Committee, in issuing its Report, expressly and publicly solicited the response of academic organizations, suggesting that they had a public duty of their own to comment on its disclosures. The American Association of University Professors has, for sixty years, defended the freedom of teachers and scholars. To have treated the disclosures of the Church Committee as worthy of no public comment, and to have proceeded solely by private correspondence, seemed to me to invite public cynicism that the AAUP was itself complacent about the witting and unwitting involvement of the profession in the matters which the Church Committee had drawn so explicitly to the profession's attention and on which it has sought some timely response. The release of my letter was meant to indicate that we do care.

Sincerely,

William Van Alstyne

Washington, D. C. 20036

Dear Professor Van Alstyne:

I received your letter of May 4, 1976, concerning CIA relations with the academic community on the same day that you released it to the press and gave a press interview about it. The fact that you did not await a response from me before making your letter public is somewhat troubling. Unfortunately, your doing this could suggest to others that your purpose is something other than the resolution of the problem you perceive.

Having said that, I firmly reject your allegations that CIA corrupts American "colleges and universities by making political fronts of them," that they "are made conduits of deceit" and that "faculty members are paid to lie." These charges reflect your ignorance of the true nature of the relationships we now have with American educational institutions and their faculties. To issue a statement that I am taking "steps to end the exploitation of the academic community," as you request, would give credibility to the series of erroneous assumptions and allegations in your letter. Whatever you have heard about the past, I can assure you that there is now no reason for the members of your association to fear any threat to their integrity or their high sense of purpose from CIA.

The Agency has several kinds of relationships with scholars and scholarly institutions. They include negotiated contracts for scientific research and development, contracts for social science research on the many matters that affect foreign policy, paid and unpaid consultations between scholars and CIA research analysts, contacts with individuals who have travelled abroad, and other similar contacts that help us fulfill our primary responsibility; i.e., to provide the policy makers of our government with information and assessments of foreign developments.

We seek the voluntary and witting cooperation of individuals who can help the foreign policy processes of the United States. Those who help are expressing a freedom of choice. Occasionally such relationships are confidential at our request, but more often they are discreet at the scholar's request because of his concern that he will be badgered by those who feel he should not be free to make this particular choice.

None of the relationships are intended to influence either what is taught or any other aspect of a scholar's work. We specifically do not try to inhibit the "free search for truth and its free exposition." Indeed, we would be foolish to do so, for it is the truth we seek. We know that we have no monopoly on fact or on understanding, and to restrict the search for the truth would be extremely detrimental to our own purposes. If CIA were to isolate itself from the good counsel of the best scholars in our country, we would surely become a narrow organization that could give only inferior service to the government. The complexity of international relations today requires that our research be strong, and we intend to keep it strong by seeking the best perspectives from inside and outside the government.

Your letter indicates a serious lack of confidence in people in your own profession--a view that I do not share; that is, your belief that your academic colleagues, including members of your association, would accept pay "to lie about the sources of their support, to mislead others, to induce betrayed confidences, to misstate the true objects of their interest, and to misrepresent the actual objectives of their work." It is precisely that kind of irresponsible charge that tends to drive responsible relationships away from openness and toward the secretiveness that you seem to abhor.

Finally, Professor Van Alstyne, the seriousness of your charges demands that we find a way toward better understanding. Because we owe that to both our organizations, I invite you to meet with a few senior officials of this Agency for that purpose.

Sincerely,

/s/ George Bush

Mr. George Bush
Director

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Mr. Bush:

The recent report of the Senate Select Committee on Foreign and Military Intelligence has confirmed what was already published elsewhere: that the CIA has for years covertly used academic institutions and employed academic persons in ways which compromise institutional and professional integrity. Universities and scholars have been paid to lie about the sources of their support, to mislead others, to induce betrayed confidences, to misstate the true objects of their interest, and to misrepresent the actual objectives of their work.

In ending the practice of CIA employment of missionaries and journalists for covert operations, you have demonstrated your concern for and your willingness to protect the integrity and independence of those institutions. As national President of the American Association of University Professors, I call upon you now to provide the same guarantees against misuse and subversion for our colleges and universities so that they may be freed of the stigma of covert, and often unknowing, participation in manipulative government operations conducted by the CIA.

The American Association of University Professors espouses the professional freedom of teachers and scholars not as some peculiar entitlement of their own but as a duty that they owe to their students and to the community as a whole. For this reason, the 1940 Statement of Principles on Academic Freedom and Tenure, issued jointly by the AAUP and the Association of American Colleges and endorsed by approximately a hundred learned and professional associations, provides:

"Institutions of higher education are conducted for the common good and not to further the interest of either the individual teacher or the institution as a whole. The common good depends upon the free search for truth and its free exposition.

Executive Registry
Room 7-E-12

A government which corrupts its colleges and universities by making political fronts of them has betrayed academic freedom and compromised all who teach. When colleges and universities are made conduits of deceit and when faculty members are paid to lie, there is an end to the common good of higher education.

On behalf of the American Association of University Professors, I write to express my dismay and utter repugnance at the disregard for the integrity of institutions of higher education shown by the CIA. The practice of shamelessly exploiting the reputation of American academics for trustworthiness, which has characterized CIA activity in the past, evidently continues today. I see no reason whatsoever why higher education should not be treated with the same regard previously shown in your action ending the covert use of missionaries and journalists by the CIA. I ask you to take steps to end the exploitation of the academic community and to disengage the Agency from covert activities which induce academics to betray their professional trust.

The American academic community awaits the necessary forthright CIA guarantees that its integrity will not be further compromised.

Sincerely,

William Van Alstyne

MEMORANDUM FOR: Mr. Bush

Your thoughts for additions to the letters to President Ward (Amherst College) and Mr. Parkhurst (Ohio Conference) were forwarded to [] the Agency's Coordinator for Academic Relations. The letter to President Ward has been revised to include your ideas (last paragraph on page 2 and all of page 3); the letter to Mr. Parkhurst was not revised because of his very specific mention of covert relationships. Both letters have the approval of the ADDO (and FR Division).

[] particularly calls attention to the language in the second sentence of the last paragraph, "I believe that on his own time,..." (underlined words being the key issue).

MEMORANDUM FOR: Barbara

I've revised the letter to President Ward of Amherst College, taking account of Mr. Bush's ideas. It seems to me that, because of the very specific mention of covert relationships in the Parkhurst letter, the response to that should not be revised. We have retyped the first page of the Parkhurst letter to accommodate the more complete address line.

Dear President Parkhurst:

Thank you for your letter of 20 May 1976, in which you informed me of the resolution recently adopted by the Ohio Conference of the AAUP. As you undoubtedly are aware, William Van Alstyne, President of the AAUP, wrote to me expressing similar concerns. I believe that my response to him was clear, and I take the liberty of quoting from that letter, dated 11 May. I said,

"The Agency has several kinds of relationships with scholars and scholarly institutions. They include negotiated contracts for scientific research and development, contracts for social science research on the many matters that affect foreign policy, paid and unpaid consultations between scholars and CIA research analysts, contacts with individuals who have travelled abroad, and other similar contacts that help us fulfill our primary responsibility; i.e., to provide the policy makers of our government with information and assessments of foreign developments.

The complexity of international relations today requires that our research be strong, and we intend to keep it strong by seeking the best perspectives from inside and outside the government."

I hope that the above statement is reassuring. Let me say that any employee of any school with whom we have had an exchange of views in his capacity as employee is free to acknowledge that fact publicly or to his college or university administration. My understanding of these matters leads me to believe, however, that while consulting with any part of our government a scholar usually thinks of himself as a private actor rather than as part of the institution of higher education from which he comes. Thus, he feels neither more nor less obligated to report his relationship with CIA than he would his consultations with other U.S. agencies, with U.S. and foreign businesses, or with foreign governments. Since we do not seek scholarly contact from particular schools, but rather reach out for advice from the best authorities wherever they may be, I see some merit in the scholar's logic.

Sincerely,

George Bush

My understanding of these matters leads me to believe, however, that while consulting with any part of our government a scholar usually thinks of himself as a private actor rather than as part of the institution of higher education from which he comes. Thus, he feels neither more nor less obligated to report his relationship with CIA than he would his consultations with other U.S. agencies, with U.S. and foreign businesses, or with foreign governments. Since we do not seek scholarly contact from particular schools, but rather reach out for advice from the best authorities wherever they may be, I see some merit in the scholar's logic.

Sincerely,

George Bush

Dear Norman:

On October 15th, I am coming back to Houston and I would like very much to meet with you and one or two of your colleagues from Rice University. I am inviting representatives from other Houston universities.

Here's what I have in mind. There is a lot of misunderstanding about CIA and about opportunities here for employment: I have been most impressed with the quality of the people with whom I work here at CIA. There are facets of our work that would appeal to almost any bright and able young person. We only accept 400 new professional employees each year. Entrance is highly competitive, but for those who are accepted, the rewards in terms of an interesting career are great.

I would like to invite you to sit down with me for an hour or so to talk, off the record, about CIA. My hope would be that after the meeting you would be able to steer a few exceptional prospects our way. I hope you will bring your Placement Director and/or an appropriate Dean.

Dear _____:

Business will be taking me to Houston on 15 October. I would like to avail myself of this opportunity to get together with you and several other Presidents of institutions of higher learning in the area.

I believe I have a message worth communicating. It has now been some nine months since I joined the Central Intelligence Agency as Director. Perhaps the strongest of my impressions from this period concerns our personnel -- the excellence of the caliber, the challenge of the career, the parallels in the search for truth between academia and our intelligence community. We bring in only about 400 professional employees each year, so that entrance is perforce highly competitive. Once on board, this competitive environment continues. Assignment, career development, training and promotion are all managed competitively. The field is limited in numbers but the rewards in terms of meaningfulness, contribution and satisfaction seem to me limitless. Our attrition is small, but to paraphrase I might say the CIA always needs a few good people.

I am hoping that you and one or two others, perhaps the Placement Director and an appropriate Dean, can join me from 4:00 to 6:00 P.M. at the Houston Club on 15 October.

Sincerely,

George Bush
Director

Dear George:

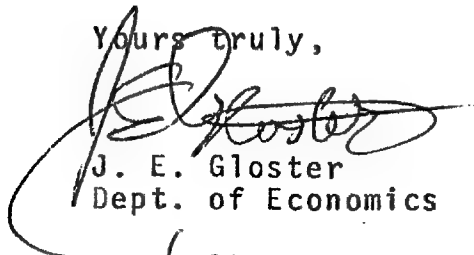

The meeting you had with the college representatives was beneficial. It dispelled doubts as what the CIA is all about and the necessity of maintaining some kind of covert activity in the protection of the United States interests. I have already conveyed to my majors in economics the opportunities in the CIA. You will be hearing from the sometime after the first of the year.

Now, this is what I would like to do for the CIA. I would like to do an area study on the Caribbean. That is an economic profile on the current condition in this area. The only country I would exclude would be Cuba. Specifically I would like to research for openers the;

1. Balance of payments deficits or surplus
2. Rate of inflation or deflation
3. Amount of unemployment
4. Changes in the gross national product
5. Rate of inflation

Please let me hear from you on this proposal.

Dear Mr. Bush,

Re: Cooperative Education

As you may know, many Federal Agencies, mostly in the executive branch, have cooperative education students, 7000 of them, working in their departments under agreements between the department and various U. S. Colleges and universities. Cooperative education is defined as a system of education involving fulltime off-campus work alternating with fulltime on-campus study. The work should be related to the students' major field of study and it should be paid work.

According to U. S. Civil Service Commission your agency does have an ongoing Cooperative Education program. Here is some introductory information about Otterbein College and our co-op program.

We at Otterbein College are just beginning our program with the help of some very welcome Federal funds provided for administrative purposes under Title IV D of the Higher Education Act of 1965. We would like to make an agreement with you to take some of our students as soon as possible. Co-op students at Otterbein may come from one of several different major fields, including general business and economics, chemistry, physics, health education, computer science (as a minor), sociology/psychology, stable management, life and earth sciences, home economics (mainly micro and macro nutritional problems), equine science (stable management), visual arts, communications, physical education (recreation) outdoor education, history/political science and various individualized interdisciplinary combinations of these.

I would like to hear from you on the possibility of our concluding an agreement and when your budget might allow for the activation of such an agreement. If there is reason for any degree of optimism on these points it would then be in order perhaps for us to talk about which job(s) our students might usefully work on. It would also be useful for us to have a sample agreement your department uses.

Sincerely yours,
